Petrograd, Sept. 28.—Dispatches from Helsingfors tell of great excitement there following the call issued by the Talmán of the Diet for a session which, according to the call, should convene at noon today. There is no secret to the plan of the Talmán and his followers to take further steps to separate Finland from Russia.

Press editorials continue to discuss with unbridled openness the so-called democratic conference in which the revolutionary element hopes to displace the provisional government.

Raise Thousand For New Ferry Road

Moebs and Hardage Successful in Their Soliciting.

Subscriptions for the new Ferry Road, connecting the Albany Ferry with East Moulton street, have passed the $1,000 mark. O. B. Moebs and A. A. Hardage, who composed the committee soliciting the funds, have been diligently at work and the results obtained have been more than gratifying.

Chief of Police Cobb has collected over $1,000 of these subscriptions already and many more are expected to come in. This road will pass through the property of the Hitt Lumber Company to East Moulton street, at a considerable distance down the river from Riverview avenue, the present means of access to the Ferry, and will do away with the necessity of the long drive down Grant street, and then down Riverview to the ferry.

Food and Crop Experts Will Make Return Trip to North Alabama

Will Organize County Marketing Association at Athens
And Will Deliver Addresses in Albany

O. W. Barrett, special assistant in crop conservation of the department of agriculture; T. P. Hay, manager of the food preparedness bureau; William James and S. W. Westbrook of the agricultural department of the Louisville & Nashville railroad—the party of experts who recently toured North Alabama—have accepted an invitation to return to both Albany and Athens. They will speak at Athens on Saturday of next week and will assist in the organization of a county marketing association. The date of their return to Albany has not been announced, but will be made known soon to the Albany Board of Commerce, which extended the invitation. The four experts addressed a large audience at the rooms of the Albany Board of Commerce on Wednesday afternoon, the meeting being one of the largest and most enthusiastic held under the auspices of the commercial body. In their talks the experts stressed the urgency for conservation, especially with regard to this year's sweet potato crop, outlined the necessity for planting fall crops and gave a general fruit and vegetable demonstration. The co-operation of the farmers and the railroads was especially urged by the two L. & N. representatives.

ONE FORTUNATE TOWN IN FLANDERS

This interesting and remarkable picture shows a view of a town in Flanders taken from a German airplane. Attention is called to the fact that it is one of the few towns in Flanders that has not been spoiled by the ravages of war. Its church, houses and green fields appear as they did before the conflict began.

STORM HITS NEW ORLEANS; HEADS TOWARDS ALABAMA

(International News Service.)

New Orleans, Sept. 28.—Four fishing vessels with 16 persons on board are missing here today and it is feared they may have perished in the hurricane which is sweeping northward over the Gulf of Mexico. The brunt of the storm is expected to hit Gulf ports late this afternoon. Biloxi, Pass Christian and other places report heavy winds and high seas.

(International News Service.)

New Orleans, Sept. 28.—Accompanied by a steadily increasing wind which had reached 80 miles an hour here at 9 o'clock, the tropical hurricane struck inland today. The center of the disturbance seems to be traveling to the northward and slightly to the east of New Orleans. There have been no reports of loss of life up to date. Communication with points to the south is cut off entirely. Advances from Gulf ports report a 50-mile wind accompanied by rain squalls.

The gale is headed for Alabama, and is expected to reach the southern portion of the state some time tonight. This information was conveyed in the report of the weather bureau this afternoon.

Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Rights Bills Is Unconstitutional

(International News Service.)

Washington, Sept. 28.—Complete failure today threatens the administration program for popularizing the draft with legislation designed to make the American soldier the best conditioned fighting man in the world. The soldiers' and sailors' civil rights bill was declared unconstitutional by the senate judiciary subcommittee which has been investigating the measure. Opposition has appeared in several quarters to the soldiers' and sailors' insurance bill and has made the passage of the measure at this session uncertain.

ARMY AND NAVY OFFICERS CAUGHT IN SPY TENTACLES

(International News Service.)

San Francisco, Sept. 28.—Wide-spread tentacles of a German spy plot that reached into the army and navy and included five members of the aviation corps, an army recruiting officer and two ensigns in the navy, are expected to be revealed today with the arrest of the men, all said to be involved in a treasonable conspiracy with Erwin Frederick Schneider of the German navy, alleged master spy, and Theodore Kasinger.

It is stated that orders have been issued for the arrest of the army and navy officers, one of the ensigns being at San Diego, Cal., and the other at Newport News. The recruiting officer involved is believed to be stationed in this city. One suspect is now at the aviation camp at San Diego.

CHANCELLOR FAILS TO DELIVER ADDRESS

Michaelis Surprises Reichstag By Sudden Move
At Last Moment

(International News Service.)

London, Sept. 28.—Germany has secretly communicated to the Pope that the central powers will go much further to obtain peace than the formal reply to the Pope's peace note indicated, according to a dispatch from Rome today. The German advice to the Holy See pointed out, it is stated, that the central powers could not be more specific in their published reply to the Pope as it would give the allies too much advantage.

GERMAN CHANCELLOR FAILS TO MAKE PEACE SPEECH.

(International News Service.)
Amsterdam, Sept. 28.—Chancellor Michaelis abandoned his plan to speak plainly on the question of peace before the Reichstag, following a conference of military leaders, according to word received here today from Berlin.

The chancellor did not announce his change in plans until the last moment before the Reichstag met. Leaders of the majority party were greatly surprised by the move. It had been expected that the chancellor would go fully into the question of Germany's war aim and detail the plans for the future of Belgium.

COL. HOUSE WILL HEAD AMERICAN PEACE COMMISSION

(International News Service.)
Washington, Sept. 28.—Col. E. M. House, closest friend of President Wilson, will head the peace commission of the United States when one is named to take up the questions which will end the war. This was the official interpretation today placed upon the naming of the Colonel to gather political, commercial and geographical matter to be utilized when the peace conference is held. The state department today admitted that Col. House had been designated to do this work, but made it plain that there was no opinion in Washington that a peace conference would be held soon.

TOM HEFLIN HITS NORTON, THE MEN GLITCH AND ROLL

(International News Service.)

Washington, Sept. 28.—The bitter controversy in the house over the charges of Representative Hefflin came to a dramatic climax this afternoon when Representative Norton of North Dakota, who attacked the southern congressman in a speech last Monday, walked over to where Representative Hefflin was seated and spoke to him in an undertone. Hefflin then arose and struck at Norton, but did not hit him. Norton struck back and the two men clinched, rolling over on the floor with Hefflin on the bottom. The house was in an uproar immediately and scores of members stepped forward to separate the two congressmen. The struggling men were pulled apart. Hefflin was taken to the democratic cloak room and Norton to the republican cloak room. Seconds were employed to cool off the two men.

(International News Service.)

Washington, Sept. 28.—Action by the house today on the charges against the members by Representative Hefflin of Alabama, is regarded as almost a certainty. Leaders on both sides said only an accident or a successful parliamentary trick could sidetrack the matter until later. The house is plainly in an ugly

WEST POINT'S GRIM YOUNG SAVAGES.

That evidence of youthfulness and lack of thought that is so often manifested by the student at college, seems to be especially rampant at the United States military academy at West Point, where the young idea and the young soldiers are simultaneously taught to shoot. From time immemorial, despite the efforts of the authorities to stamp it out, hazing has been a favorite indoor sport among the cadets. Some faint of the jungle seems to impel the embryo officer to the doing of deeds that would reflect credit only upon the untamed savage or a German butcher. The popular superstition that "the bravest are the gentlest" is discredited by the cruel youngsters who are paid a salary to learn how to command. The Biblical admonition that he who can rule his own spirit is greater than he who can rule a city is lost sight of by the juvenile disciples of Mars. Though their one object in life should be to acquire self-mastery, so that they may strengthen the purp, as of others, they apparently unbridle all their better instincts and indulge in wild orgies which are intended to terrorize and humiliate the underclassmen. Recent revelations, due to the summoning of a dozen of the offenders to justice, have been more startling even than those that have gone before. Witnesses have testified that the victims "were forced to strip to the waist, stand on tiptoe with chin in and head back until they fainted." This is nothing more nor less than grim savagery masquerading under the guise of humor, a brand of fun that is always at the expense of the other fellow. Drastic steps should be taken to curb this propensity for lapsing into barbarism. "Mollycoddies," in a broad sense, are those who would take advantage of opportunities to impose upon the defenseless. West Pointers should be men.

PRACTICE WHAT WE PREACH.

The past two weeks the Boosters have stressed to the people "Buy at Home," in every village and hamlet visited. The hearers of our speakers were urged to "Trade at Home," and to support the home merchant. This was the keynote of everything said and done throughout the entire trip of two weeks. If our people are to realize their hopes of building a city here, they must practice what they preach and give the merchants of these cities their loyal support. They must buy from our merchants their needs and in doing this our money is kept at home. Money to commerce is what blood is to man. If the mail order houses and merchants of nearby cities get our money it drains the life of our commerce and nothing is left with which to develop and sustain our home institutions. Let all resolve to give our trade to the home merchant, first, last and all the time, all things being equal, and put into practice what we preach.

MORGAN CONTRIBUTES GOOD CITIZEN TO LIMESTONE.

Judge and Mrs. S. L. Cook leave today for Athens to reside there in the future. Albany sends to Limestone county a man who will prove a most valuable addition. Judge Cook in his many years residence here has been an important factor in the upbuilding of these cities and his leaving is a matter of general regret.

DIDN'T THINK SHE'D EVER BE WELL AGAIN

"TANLAC HAS MADE ME WELL AND STRONG," SHE SAYS. GAINED 29 POUNDS.

"I am now twenty-nine pounds heavier than I was when I began using Tanlac and I feel like a new woman in every way," said Mrs. Annie Miles, residing at 1445 Evergreen avenue, Jacksonville, Fla., a short time ago.

"For twenty long years I suffered with stomach trouble and indigestion and tried everything I ever heard of for it, but kept getting worse all the time," she continued. "I just had to force myself to eat enough to keep me alive and what little I did eat made me suffer hours of agony, from gas that would rise on my stomach. I had awful headaches and dizzy spells constantly and was so nervous I could hardly sleep. I fell off in weight and got so weak and no-account that I felt I could never be well again."

"One of my neighbors told me what Tanlac had done for her and I started taking it. I began to pick up right away. I kept on gaining until I had increased in weight twenty-nine pounds and my strength has come back to me in full force. I can eat anything I want and everything tastes good. My nerves are alright again and I sleep like a child at night and get up in the morning feeling fine. Tanlac has made me strong and well again."

Tanlac is sold in Albany by Preult-Dillehay Drug Co., and by one regular established agency in every town. (Adv.)

AMUSEMENTS

Virginia Pearson and Irving Cummings in a "Royal Romance at the Delite and Star Today."

A film operatta, something new in motion pictures, is the attraction offered at the Delite and Star theatres today. It is the William Fox production, "Royal Romance," with Virginia Pearson, "Never was there a happier or more daintily humorous picture presented to the public."

Princess Sylvia, played by Miss Pearson, refuses to wed the Emperor Maximilian of Rhaetia (Irving Cummings) because his ministers and not his heart suggested the match.

On a hunting trip she meets the emperor travelling incog. He falls in love with her at once, despite the fact that she is posing as an English girl. When he is called to his capital Sylvia and her mother follow. There she saves him from an assassin.

After introducing his saviour to the court Maximilian asks her to become his morganatic wife. She refuses and then he determines to make her his empress.

The ministers are stirred at this. The premier determines to block the match and asks Gerald (Boyce Coombs), Sylvia's brother, to compromise the English girl by taking her to an inn. Gerald agrees.

That evening Maximilian and his minister surprise Sylvia and Gerald at supper in a private room. The emperor turns to leave the place in anger when Gerald introduces her as the Princess Sylvia, his sister. Then all misunderstandings are cleared up and Maximilian asks Sylvia to become his empress. She accepts.

Women in the War

By G. Kay Spencer
(International News Service.)

FRAU REIMER, CHAUFFEUSE.

Out of the little East Prussian town of Tapiau has come the first and only woman to actually perform staff-dispatch work with a motor under fire. Frau Reimer, the young wife of an army surgeon, has taken her car through the seven hells of modern battle and has successfully performed her tasks under the extremely difficult and dangerous conditions obtaining in East Prussia and Russian Poland, during the headlong retreat of the Russian armies, subsequent to the Mazurian Lakes debacle.

Quite unaffectionately she narrates her experience of thrilling rides at terrific speed, with shrapnel splattering her machine and Russian snipers cutting the air around her; of hardships sufficient to break a strong man; gay Christmas festivals in the field with staff officers, and a presentation to the emperor.

Her military career was precipitated by a rather too efficient service rendered to a young lieutenant in a great hurry to get to Insterburg from Tapiau. He had asked for a volunteer chauffeur and she had responded.

Her cool ability to stay with the car and hang on to the wheel through the heaviest fire of hostile batteries impressed the officer to such an extent that she soon was attached to the staff of General Von Clausius. Then, in the solemn presence of a major, a formal contract was drawn up between the Imperial German government, party of the first party, and Anne Marie Reimer, party of the second part, whereby she was officially appointed a volunteer automobile driver in the German army. After a few hours' leave, to send her little daughter off to friends in Berlin, she cranked up her Mercedes, leaped to the wheel and drove off to the thick of the fighting.

In the fighting near Tilsit this dauntless woman advanced with the troops, continuously under fire, coolly observing the odd postures assumed by dying men. She comments on it in her memories of the day.

As the army drove forward over the frontier, Frau Reimer carried her cargo of corpulent staff officers along with the advance—sometimes too near the advance for the ease of these massive officers, who usually desired to get on the ground after their pawns had had sufficient time to make things reasonably safe.

When the actual dividing line was reached between the German crown land and Russian Poland she turned her hooded head and facetiously remarked, "Gentlemen, your passports, please."

The joke had just faded on her lips when a murderous shrapnel fire opened on the car from a nearby Russian emplacement. Mudguards, radiator and chassis were beat and hammered by the wicked steel, but Annie Marie Reimer coaxed that machine through sloughs of Russian mud and over slippery wooden bridges until she finally dashed into Schirwindt like a young typhoon, with her cargo shaken up and groveling in undignified postures all over the big leather cushions. Otherwise, she had brought them through safely. As the big Mercedes came to a halt, a major came rushing forward, saying in horror-struck tones, "Do you mean to tell me that you have escaped from hell all safe and sound?"

Adventures of the kind were plentiful in the days that followed, especially as Frau Reimer was always within an hour of the advanced patrols in rolling, into captured territory. Once while she was seated at luncheon in a little village a Russian shell exploded outside in the street, killing four men and eleven horses and wounding five men. A chip of shell carried a cup from her hands. That was only annoying. She would have another cup. Then she coolly rendered medical attention to the wounded, while six shells in succession rained down in the vicinity.

At one village, immediately behind the advance, Frau Reimer's duties carried her into a maze of dead and dying horses and men. There had been street and house-to-house fighting and things were muddled up a bit. A bullet whizzed past her ear and lodged in a stone wall behind her. The most natural thing to do, of course, was to go after the would-be donor of the little souvenir. She got him—by the nap of the neck—but he emptied his shell-clip while she coolly walked up to him.

But, plucky as she was, Nature asserted herself, and soon the little chauffeuse was in Konigsberg hospital with a raging fever, engendered by exposure in the frozen lake region. Her rugged constitution soon overpowered the invading disease and several weeks' time saw her up and about.

She wanted to return to her work. But she was to meet disappointment, for the German war ministry had decided in the meantime that volunteer chauffeurs should not be employed with the army. Influences with friends and officers was of no avail and she finally had to reconcile herself to the fact that her soldiering was over.

Who's Who in the World's Series

By Jack Veiock
(International News Service.)

JOHN COLLINS.
(White Sox Outfielder.)

John Collins is a White Sox veteran. He has been a member of Comiskey's teams for the past eight years, and although he is not a sensational ball player, he is consistently good enough to keep his name on the payroll.

Prior to the time he reached a position in professional circles, where he commanded the attention of big league scouts, Collins played semi-professional and professional ball in New England. He was with the Haverhill club in the New England League for several seasons and finally wound up at Springfield from which club the White Sox purchased him at the close of the season of 1909.

Collins came to the Chicago club with a reputation as a terrific hitter, and at the time he had had but little experience as an outfielder, for in New England he played first base, second base and shortstop.

In his first season with the Sox, Collins flivvered as a batsman. In ninety-seven games in 1910 he hit only 197, playing between first base and the outfield. The following year he performed at the initial bag in 106 games and batted 262. Since that time he has played both first base and the outfield, but the best batting average he has turned in was .290 in 1912.

Collins alternates in the gardens with Nemo Leibold. The presence of Chick Gandil in the Chicago line-up has eliminated the necessity of playing him on the initial bag, and the White Sox have a promising young first sacker in Ted Jourdan. So Collins' remaining days with the Sox will be spent in the suburban patches of the field.

EDDIE MURPHY

(Utility Outfielder of White Sox.)

Like Eddie Collins, Jack Barry and many other pupils of Connie Mack, Eddie Murphy, utility outfielder and pinch hitter of the White Sox, is a college bred player.

Murphy was a star with the Villanova College nine in 1911. He played nearly every position on the team at some time or other, and his bat blasted the hopes of many an opposing college pitcher.

When school closed in the Spring of 1911, Murphy hooked on with the Scranton club in the New York State League and played shortstop, second base and the outfield. His fielding was sensational, especially in the outer gardens, and he pounded the pill at a 300 clip, with the result that Mack purchased him for the Athletics, where he played, with the exception of a short period spent at Baltimore, until July, 1915.

It was while Mack was breaking up his famous championship team that the White Sox grabbed Murphy, and according to reports of the sale, Charley Comiskey paid a cold $13,000 for the player. Murphy's playing since he joined the White Sox has not set the league on fire, but he is still a capable batsman and felder, and during the late stages of the American League race his bat did yeoman service when he was called to clout in the pinches.

HER PART.

Be this my part
Until he come again—
To keep the hearth fire lighted
And his name
Unsilenced from all stain,
To keep mine own and all other
Hearts in mind
The debt we owe the humblest of his kind
Who have gone forth yielding their life, their all,
In their swift answer to their country's call.

Be this my part
To hold my courage high,
To falter not, nor flinch, although the cry
Of sorrow may not pass me by,
To keep my soul
From hate and malice free,
To grant to all love's perfect charity,
To heal all wounds with mine own gentleness
And crave for all his spirit's tenderness.
But, if the hour of stress shall come
to me,
Let me not yield my soul's nobility
To aught save death—
For I would die.
With face uplifted to God's questioning sky,
Even as he.

Be this my part
So when he shall come home,
Albeit if suffering,
He shall gladly come.
But if no more he shall return to me
Who is the very music of my life,
My shield in strife,
The laughter and the sunlight of my days,
Let me give praise
That thus he died,
The holder of his country's love and pride
And, kneeling, thank Him
That beneath the sod
Lies manhood worthy
Of his Maker, God.

THOUGHT.

It ain't the guns nor armament, nor fund that they can pay,
But the close co-operation that makes
'em win the day.
It ain't the individual nor the army
as a whole,
But the everlastin' teamwork of every bloomin' soul.

Richard Buhler Opens the Masonic; Play Great, "Believe Me Xantippe"

Richard Buhler opened the 1917-18 season at the Masonic theatre last night with a masterly presentation of his New York success, "Believe Me, Xantippe," the Harvard prize play. And "believe me, Xantippe," the production is one that merited a much better patronage than it received. The all-day rain drizzled along through the early hours of the night and reduced the attendance. The precipitation, however, could not dampen the enthusiasm, and from the moment that the star appeared until the final curtain, the audience was demonstrative in its appreciation of both play and players.

Mr. Buhler, in the title role of George McFarland, a representative of New York's idle rich with a penchant for a favorite slang expression, was splendidly cast. Equally as clever was Miss Margaret Knight, of Nashville, Tenn., who, as Dolly Kannmann, promoted to deputy sheriff, played opposite Mr. Buhler. The company as a whole is exceptionally well balanced.

Involving an original plot, the play itself is one of many subtle situations, which the presenting company took full advantage of. The story was that of a Gotham clubman who held cynical views regarding the activities and abilities of the minions of the law and wagered $30,000 with two friends that he could commit a crime and remain undetected for one year. He forged a note, made his escape from the Metropolis and finally surrendered to a bit of a western girl on the sixth day before the expiration of the twelve months' period. The surrender was so complete that McFarland remained a life prisoner in the hands of the Arizona lassie. He won his wager also, for the girl was only the daughter of the sheriff at the time she took her prisoner into custody, being later promoted for her bravery.

The coming season will perhaps offer local theatre goers no opportunity to see a better play and one more satisfactorily presented than was "Believe Me, Xantippe," with Richard Buhler and Miss Margaret Knight playing the leads.

Albany Red Cross Adopts Constitution and By-Laws

Today the Albany Red Cross work room at the Y. M. C. A. building is under the direction of Mrs. Virginia Craham. She and her co-workers are expected to equal or surpass the efforts of Mrs. W. R. Hall and her corps as reported at a special meeting of the Red Cross held at the Y. M. C. A. last night. Aside from the report on work, now being done by the ladies, the most important thing of last night's session was the report of Maj. Charles Bassett and Dr. H. R. Thompson on a new constitution and by-laws. The new instrument as drawn is modeled after the constitution of the National Red Cross Society, and on motion of Fred A. Bloodworth, was adopted without a single change. According to the constitution the society is to meet regularly the first Monday night of each month at 7:30 o'clock, which throws the October meeting for next Monday night, at which time Rev. L. F. Goodwin, the chairman, promises an interesting literary and musical program in addition to the business meeting. To both divisions the public and all members of the Red Cross are cordially invited.

Rev. L. F. Goodwin led in prayer at the opening of last night's meeting, and then called the order of business. Mrs. Kimbal B. Jones, after the adoption of the new constitution and by-laws, at the direction of the society, agreed to furnish copies of it to the chairmen of the several committees. Mrs. Jones also, in behalf of the membership committee, will see that the many members of the society are duly notified of their membership and the duties expected of them.

Mrs. A. A. Hardage in behalf of the purchasing committee, stated that the demand for new yarns was exceeding the supply of money set aside for that purpose, and at once other funds were put at the disposal of her committee. The resignation of A. A. Hardage as a member of the finance committee was announced and referred to the executive committee. The meeting directed that F. A. Bloodworth, treasurer, be furnished a list of all probable purchases at the time the orders are given.

The following official list shows the number of hours the following ladies have worked during the last three days:

Mrs. McCarthy, 7 hours.
Mrs. E. S. Johnson, 7 hours.
Mrs. E. R. Wolfe, 7 hours.
Mrs. Hal Mullen, 7 hours.
Mrs. W. H. Duncan, 12 hours.
Mrs. C. T. Hardeman, 7 hours.
Mrs. Fletcher, 10 hours.
Mrs. Pryor, 3 hours.
Mrs. Bracken, 3 hours.
Miss Mary Sheppard, 3 hours.
Mrs. H. S. Roberts, 3 hours.
Mrs. A. Z. Bailey, 3 hours.
Mrs. Thos. Hatton, 3 hours.
Mrs. Buchheit, 4 hours.
Miss Katie McJilton, 5 1/2 hours.
Mrs. Brents Preuit, 5 1/2 hours.
Mrs. W. R. Hall, 17 hours.

The Actor of Today Must Watch His Step, Just as Other Men

RICHARD BUHLER

Star Also Digresses to Say That Albany and Decatur Are Progressive and Well Lighted Cities

"The actor of today must watch his step, just as much as the men in other professions. He must be sober, reliable, honest, with a diligent care as to his personal habits. And above all else, he must be competent."

This was the gist of Richard Buhler's summary of the requisites of the actor of today, when interviewed by a representative of the Daily at the Masonic theatre last night. Mr. Buhler discoursed about his profession in a most vivacious and comprehensive manner. The great actor undoubtedly has a keen conception and thorough understanding of the fundamental and intricate workings of the game called Life, which he has earned in that most thorough of all schools—Experience.

"I prefer the stage to motion pictures," he continued. "On the screen the actor goes through a series of automaton-like movements, thus leaving the real lucid meaning of his emotions, and the fine points of the character he is portraying to the imagination of his audience. On the stage an audience is much nearer the performer, both literally and figuratively. The spoken word of the stage contributes practically seventy-five per cent of the impression that is made upon the auditors."

"I see you have a thriving little city here," said the former "Ben Hur" star, suddenly digressing from the subject of the stage. "One thing that impressed me very much as I came over to the theatre tonight was the number of electric signs you have here. In fact, these two towns seem to be much more progressive than some of the larger cities I have visited in this section during my present tour."

Mr. Buhler has been before the public since 1893, and at one time was the youngest leading man on the American stage, being starred at the Herald Square theatre, New York, when only eighteen years of age. Mr. Buhler comes by his histrionic ability naturally. His home is in Washington, D. C., in which his father is a well-known sculptor. His sister is an artist and his mother was an actress of the old school.

STREET CARNIVAL TO OPEN MONDAY

Will Play Under Auspices of the Home Guards and Baseball Team.

The Great Cosmopolitan Shows will open Monday evening at the baseball grounds for a week's run. The street carnival, which carries many attractions, will appear here under the auspices of the Albany Home Guards and the Baseball team, and a percentage of all receipts will go to these two organizations. The Ball club is raising funds with which to pay off the indebtedness on the grounds and a balance due on the grandstand and fencing. The Home Guards are in need of funds to complete payments on the uniforms which they recently purchased at a cost of several hundred dollars.

The programme of the Cosmopolitan Shows include a minstrel show, log and pony show and cabaret. A free band concert will be given daily.

Tennessee River is Beginning to Rise

Unusually Low, However, Due to the Long Dry Spell.

Following the heavy rains of yesterday, the Tennessee river has begun to rise. This morning the gauge read 2.1 feet, a rise of seven-tenths of a foot since yesterday, when the gauge read 1.4 feet and not 16.4 feet, as erroneously stated in the Daily. Owing to the long dry spell, the river is at a very low stage and a rise at this time will not prove alarming to owners of bottom lands.

The total rainfall, as reported this morning by Mrs. I. H. Irons, official observer, was 1.85 inches from 7 o'clock yesterday morning until 7 o'clock this morning.
